

Dr Neil Shastri-Hurst

Personal Injury

Year of Call: 2019

Email Clerks: pi@no5.com

Neil is dual qualified in Medicine and Law, specialising in Clinical Negligence and Personal Injury. Neil started his medical career in the Royal Army Medical Corps and has practised both within the Army and in the civilian world. He has over a decade of experience as a doctor, having specialised in Orthopaedics and Major Trauma. Latterly, Neil held the position of Honorary Consultant Trauma Co-ordinator for the Major Trauma Service at University Hospitals Birmingham, which hosts the Royal Centre of Defence Medicine.

During his clinical career, Neil was actively involved in research. He was a member of the Plastics Operative Workload in Major Trauma Centres (POW-MTC), UK Wound management in Open Lower Limb Fractures (UK WOLLF), and UK Fixation of Distal Tibia Fractures (UK FixDT) multicentre research collaboratives. His research has been published on numerous occasions by international peer review journals. Furthermore, his work has been presented at several international conferences.

In addition to his clinical work, Neil was appointed a Medical Member of the Medical Practitioners Tribunal in 2016; he continued to sit in this capacity until 2022.

Neil brings to his legal practice his medical knowledge and experience. He is skilled at analysing medical records and, through his research experience, he has acquired the critical analytical skills required to effectively evaluate scientific papers.

Neil continued his medical practice alongside his full time legal studies. During his time at the University of Law, Birmingham, he received several academic awards, culminating in the Baron Dr ver Heyden De Lancey Prize.

Neil appears in court on a wide range of matters, including trials and interlocutory hearings. Neil balances his court work with a busy paperwork practice. He regularly drafts pleadings and advices in relation to fast-track and multi-track matters.

In the field of Personal Injury, Neil maintains a broad practice across all core areas, including those involving life changing injuries and fatal claims. Given his professional background, he has developed a particular interest in cases involving major traumatic injuries. He has brought his medical experience to bear when being led on cases involving catastrophic injuries.

Recommendations

“Neil’s medical knowledge adds value as a barrister, ability to give clear advice and ability to speak with the medical experts and decipher medical terms. He can gain the lay client’s trust and confidence quickly. He has an excellent manner and can communicate complex medical issues in clear non-medical language.”

Legal 500 Rising Star (Tier 1) Clinical Negligence

“Neil adds extra value as a barrister in this area with all his medical knowledge as a clinician. He has handled various inquests for us where his skills are invaluable.”
